| LWA reinforces its environmental law practice with the arrival of a new Partner: Pauline Leddet-Troadec |

Pauline's arrival significantly reinforces the skills of the firm in this area that has a highly strategic characteristic for our clients.

Pauline Leddet-Troadec assists her clients, French and international companies, regarding all issues relating to environmental regulations. She intervenes, in particular, in industrial environmental law (classified installations, industrial risks, contaminated sites and soils, waste, etc.). She has developed a strong experience in the negotiation and drafting of contractual provisions in the framework of real property transactions (sale and lease back transactions, lease agreements, etc.). Furthermore, she counsels her clients regarding issues relating to sustainable development and biodiversity, such as compensation obligations and the derogations relating to protected species.

Acting in a capacity as lawyer at the Paris Bar since 2012, Pauline graduated at the University of Aix-Marseille III with a Master II in international and European environmental law. Pauline practiced at the firm Boivin et associés and at Foley Hoag in a capacity as Counsel. Pauline founded the environmental law Interprofessional circle (Cidde), for which she is the President. This network enables environmental law professionals (lawyers, attorneys, legal journalists, etc.) to discuss and share their experiences. Pauline is also very much invested, in a capacity as General Secretary in the association Elles&Droit that gathers legal professionals from all sectors.

"LWA naturally appeared to me as being the best choice to develop my practice and assist my clients, particularly given the multidisciplinary and independent characteristic of the firm. I am delighted to join LWA to create a practice that is specifically dedicated to environmental law and therefore answer the constantly growing requirements of the clients of the firm" Pauline Leddet-Troadec explains.

"The firm demonstrates true dynamics and a determined investment in the matters of the future. The dynamism and talent of Pauline, our new partner, respond in all aspects to our ambition" indicate Amélie d'Heilly and Marion Delaigue, co-managers of the Firm.
